

Background

Sophie in her mid twenties has just been offered a job at the shopping centre working in a department store. She really wants to get back to working full time but it's been a while as she stopped work after her first child was born, she's got two now! Her partner works too so with the shifts she will need to get someone to look after the children at times, Sophie's mum and sister have offered to help.

As a family they have been getting some benefits but Sophie expects them to stop when she starts working full time. She's worried that it might be a struggle at first with the change in when they get their money. If Sophie takes the job what does she need to arrange to get through to payday?
